

DEAD QUEEN'S GOWN SHOWN IN NEW YORK

Dress Which Reached Belgrade the Morning Draga and King Alexander Were Assassinated Bought by Bloomingdale Bros.

MADE IN PARIS FOR HER.

It is an Exquisite Creation of Ivory-Tinted Broadcloth, the Bodice Being of Chiffon Over Taffeta, with Loose Front of Silk Embroidery.

Queen Draga's gown! This is the interesting and beautiful garment that Bloomingdale Bros. have brought to this country and will exhibit in the suit department at their store at Third Avenue and Fifty-ninth street. The dress actually belonged to the assassinated Queen of Serbia and was delivered at the palace in Belgrade the very morning of the assassination.

There are more reasons than one why the rare and costly gown should arouse interest. Part of the life history of the murdered Queen is wrapped up in the chiffon and lace of the Parisian creation which she was doomed never to wear, and which by the strangest of chances has found its way to a New York shop.

The gown was procured for Mr. Bloomingdale shortly after the assassination. It has been placed upon a wax figure made in the image of Serbia's late Queen.

The gown itself is an exquisite Parisian creation. It is of ivory-tinted broadcloth. The simple and subdued tints alone mark a change in Queen Draga's ideas and show that she was abandoning her almost barbaric love of high colors, and sometimes garish display of tints for the more quiet ones of a correct Parisian dresser.

The bodice of the gown is made of chiffon over taffeta, and over this is a loose front of handsome silk hand-made embroidery, which is set into the broadcloth. The loose front terminates with applique of embroidery merged into the sleeve, giving the shoulder cape effect. The sleeves, which are mellow shape, have deep cuffs of heavy hand-made open embroidery.

A stole of broadcloth and embroidery goes with the garment, which may be worn with or without it. The stole is, like the waist, made of the strip effect in embroidery and medallion, and is also embroidered with a design used on the skirt.

The elaborate skirt of this garment is exquisitely patterned. Around the hips the open hand-made embroidery in the deep strip effect is interlaced with medallion effects, while a panel of rich embroidery extends to the bottom of the skirt, ending in a deep fringe. Around the bottom of the skirt, which is demurely a design of embroidered runs, interwoven with the open lace-work, forms an elaborate design in the back. The runs are of solid embroidery while the rays are of the strip effect of open work. The solid embroidery blends into the deeper shades of ray.

DRESS MADE FOR QUEEN DRAGA, WHO WAS ASSASSINATED IN BELGRADE.

HERE'S A CHANCE TO GET A WIFE AND A HOTEL, TOO.

The little post-office in the village of Hilton, N. J., never had such a rush of business as at present. The mail sack that is dropped off the train there is bulging out with letters for Mrs. Lola Earle, the good-looking widow who advertised for a husband to help her manage the Hilton House. Men all over the country are willing "to take a chance." Mrs. Earle has three daughters, the youngest being seven years old. She was formerly an acrobat and she comes of a family of circus performers. It has been several years since she was with Barnum, and she does not intend to go into the barnyard circus again. Her husband left her the hotel at Hilton, but she has found it a great difficulty to run it without the assistance of a man. Finally she decided to advertise. The answers that are pouring in on her come from men in all walks of life and from every section of the country.

She has not yet made a selection, but the application of a New York chef is being seriously considered. She feels that such a man would be valuable in the hotel business. However, there are scores that must be considered before the final decision is made. "Most of them are from men who write a nice love letter," she said, "and in the last line say that they have no money. I don't want that kind. I want a good, sensible man, who isn't looking for a soft snap."

SEEKS TO BE HERO; COMES TO GRIEF

Patrick Buckley's Downfall Is Directly Traceable to Effort to Save Life that Resulted in Fight.

Trying to become a hero has caused the downfall of many a man since the world began, and added to the list is now one Patrick Buckley, a teamster, who lives at No. 122 Roosevelt street. Patrick became a hero only late last night, but to-day he is in the Hudson Street Hospital. The doctors say that he landed in there freely at the celebration which followed his daring feat in leaping into the waters of the East River after a man who had jumped from the dock.

The fact that Patrick failed to rescue his men, who were finally saved by his own efforts, does not detract from the story due him in the opinion of his admiring friends, and Buckley himself thinks that is a mere matter of detail. The fact that he tried strenuously is beyond question.

Buckley was on the coal dock of Alfred Barker Co., at the foot of Dover street. A man, who later said he was Charles Johnson, ran down to the edge of the water, followed by a policeman. The policeman had to drag him away. A few minutes later the man reappeared on the run. He had evidently given the policeman the slip, and without a word he dived into the water. It was Buckley's chance to show his wife and friends on the pier the hero he had made of, and without stopping to undress he plunged in after the would-be suicide.

Johnson evidently disliked the thought of a watery grave when once in the water, and he made for a small raft. Buckley, who was in the water, succeeded in getting out of the water, and for fear Johnson would make another attempt to drown himself, he seized him by the hair. Johnson retaliated by choking Buckley, and serious trouble might have followed had not Policeman Leonard appeared to take them both safely ashore.

Johnson was taken to the station-house and Buckley started out to one's house. He was too sincere about it, and several hours later the ambulance was called to his home. He was suffering from cramps, and was taken to the hospital.

LOST MOORISH POSTS. BERLIN, Sept. 15.—A dispatch from Fez Morocco, says that General Sir Henry McLean, colonel of the Sultan's bodyguard, is about to depart on indefinite sick leave. The Sultan's English physician has also gone away. This indicates that the Sultan is carrying out his announced policy of getting rid of his foreign advisers.

EXPRESS TRAIN HITS AUTOMOBILE

Two Occupants of Latter Jump and Escape Unhurt, the Third Is Hurled Forty Feet but Miraculously Escapes Death.

(Special to The Evening World.) SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 15.—Speeding at fifty miles an hour, the Bar Harbor Express which left New York at 9 o'clock last night struck an automobile on the "Old Tavern" crossing in Windsor Locks, Conn., fifteen miles south of Springfield.

John E. Bishop, of Boston, claim agent of the B. and A. division of the New York Central; John M. Reed and William D. Reed, of this city, were the occupants of the auto which was twisted into an irreparable wreck.

Bishop and William Reed jumped as the locomotive struck the auto and escaped, but John Reed, who was in the back seat, was thrown forty feet. His companions expected to find him dead, but to their joy he was alive, but with a sprained ankle, contusions on every part of the body and a probable fractured rib. He was placed on the train and Mr. Bishop telegraphed for a physician to meet the party. On arriving here John Reed was taken in a carriage to his home in Oriskany street.

The automobilists were on the way to Hartford and had slowed the machine down to the low gear to cross the railroad. The auto was on the tracks when John Reed, on the back, cried to his brother: "Bill, the express!"

It was too late to do anything but jump. Mr. Bishop and William Reed succeeded in clearing themselves from the machine. When the impact came John Reed was caught and thrown. The automobile was hurled the length of the crossing and over the embankment.

Mr. Bishop said he just had time to see Mr. Reed flying through the air and saw him land in the clump of bushes. The men were much shaken by their terrifying experience, and it was some time after the accident before they were able to realize how miraculous had been their escape.

The auto was valued at $5,500. TILMAN JUDGE OPPOSED. SPARTANSBURG, S. C., Sept. 15.—The State has asked Chief Justice Pope to vacate the order appointing Judge Townsend to preside at the trial of James H. Tillman, charged with the murder of Editor Gonzales. Decision will be made soon.

WINS HUSBAND SHE CHASED TO OMAHA

May Mallory, Soubrette, Bride of Ralph Cole, Luna Park Manager's Son, Gets Him Back After Long Pursuit.

May Mallory, a music-hall soubrette of Coney Island, is the bride of Ralph Cole, the young son of Clifford Cole, the wealthy Omaha theatrical man, who has the Grand Casino concession at Luna Park. Cole is nineteen years old. May Mallory is a few years his senior. They met and loved in the month of June, and the Rev. William Blakeman, of the Sheepshead Bay Methodist Church, married them.

It took two weeks for young Mr. Cole to muster up courage to tell his parents. Then the storm of wrath that broke forth from the elder Cole very nearly made him forget his love. His father hustled him off to Omaha. The deserted bride gathered up her quarters and half dollars and gave chase. She found him, and young Cole, hesitating between his father and his bride, telegraphed for funds. With the funds came the injunction.

"Come home at once," Cole hurried to New York and the twice-deserted bride, nothing daunted, again gave chase across the continent. When they met face to face on Surf avenue, Coney Island, two weeks ago, they decided to go together and plead for forgiveness and blessing. Their tears and entreaties did not move the hearts of the parents, however. "You can't live at home," said the father. "You can't live at home," said the mother. Young Cole chose a business in New York City, and the bride and bridegroom are now living happily as if they had the parental blessing.

FINED $50 UNDER NEW LAW.

John Frazer, Junk Dealer, Bought Lead Pipe from Boy.

It cost John Frazer, a junk dealer, at No. 206 Avenue A, $50 for buying sixteen seven-cents' worth of lead pipe from a thirteen-year-old boy. The law which Frazer violated only went into effect Sept. 1. He was convicted in the Court of Special Sessions to-day, and was given the option of paying a fine of $50 or going to jail for ten days.

"This law," Justice Mayer declared in sentencing Frazer, "is one of the most just ever placed on the statutes. It prevents unscrupulous junk dealers from making thieves of young children. It has been proven in this court on numerous occasions that damage to the amount of hundreds of dollars has been done by boys to houses just for the purpose of securing a few cents from junk dealers. I will give warning now that all junk dealers convicted of violating this law will be severely punished." The lead pipe had been stolen by a man from the New York Telephone Company, who gave it to the boy to sell.

This Is the First of Our Fall Opening Days for the Fashions of 1903-04.

If this finest of New York stores, dressed in its autumn clothes, could pass before you in review this morning, instead of this message in molten metal, no engagement of any sort would keep you from being here. It is an occasion worthy of strongest emulation, and we lend to it our most inviting adjectives.

Within the four walls of this mercantile mart we present to-day the

Simpson Crawford Company Congress of Style Masterpieces

We have never aimed so high to make the store and stocks thoroughly representative of everything worthy and good. How far we have succeeded will be best attested by your appreciation and criticism. We know, however, that never has there been gathered together so perfect, so complete, so masterful a collection of dress-newness.

To-day and all this week the store invites you to an inspection of Millinery. Imported Costumes. Garments and Wraps. Waists. French Lingerie.

Dress Goods. Silks. and Kindred Stocks.

So far as the individual departments are concerned, pages of this paper could not do justice to the subject.

Wherever style reigns, our commissioners go. Whatever is new and best they bring to New York. They search the fashion quarters of London, Paris and Berlin; they spend weeks and months in the preparation of this vast picture you see to-day.

Music & Decorations

complete the maze of beauty and entertainment, for the store breathes the spirit of the occasion. As an event in the mercantile history of New York, it stands without a peer, and

Our invitation for you to be here is as earnest and hearty as we can possibly make it.
